Specifically, Clinton Stewart explained the relationship between DKH and IRP, presented a technical description of the application, DKH that IRP owned the software, and IRP used contractors provided through DKH.

The staffing prospectus laid out in full detail what IRP was requesting of Idea Integration. Idea Integration rejected the business proposal set forth in the prospectus for $1.7 million of staffing services over a six month period and offered IRP executives the ability to work on a traditional staff augmentation basis. IRP accepted their offer and sent job descriptions. Idea integration filled these jobs with contractors from their contracting pool and recruiting efforts. Idea provided all the necessary contract and/or credit docs. Absolutely no misrepresentations in the prospectus.
